

What is claimed is:

1. A semiconductor device comprising an electronic circuit having at least one function which is formed on a substrate having an insulative surface using at least two semiconductor regions where 5 crystals are grown in a direction parallel or substantially parallel to the substrate, wherein the two regions have the same crystal growth form.

*Add
A1>*